By the time Brian was in his last year of high school, he had become one of the best running backs the school had ever seen. He couldn’t wait to graduate and play football at a big university. But sadly, when college coaches saw the small mouse on the field, they all shrugged and shook their heads. “Too small. Tough little fella, but I’m not sure he has what it takes.”
So the small player decided he would go to a small college and do big things. And that’s just what he did.